

Biography
Ian Jasenof, MD, FACO, MHA, CPE

Dr. Ian Jasenof is the Chief Medical Officer for the Mile Square Center, which is under the direction of UI Health. In addition to the duties of CMO, he directs all aspects of operations within the division. Dr. Jasenof has had a long multifaceted professional career in various leadership roles with a large vertically integrated health system.

His medical training started with the completion of his medical degree at the Rush Medical College. Afterward, he completed his residency in obstetrics & gynecology at the University of Illinois Health Center.

His prior leadership roles include Director of Undergraduate Education where he directed both the third and fourth year medical students in their development in health care. As the M3 director, he was responsible for both the didactic and clinical education for the department of obstetrics and gynecology for two of Chicago's major medical schools, Rosalind Franklin University of Medicine and Science and the University Illinois Medical School.

In addition, prior to accepting his leadership role with Mile Square, he served as an ex-officio Board of Director member for Advocate Physician Partners (APP). APP is one of the nation's leading care management entities and is associated with Advocate Health Care. APP is a leader in clinical integration, population health and value-based-healthcare. APP has an associated accountable care organization of over 1 million patients.

Dr. Jasenof's role included membership in the Peer Review & Credentialing Committee as a founding member. He was then promoted to a member of the Quality Improvement Committee whose directive is to provide foundational policy initiatives on population health guidelines for physician membership of APP. This experience brings a deep understanding of HEDIS metrics, which provides guidelines on patient management and outcomes.
