

Dino P. Rumoro, DO, MPH, FACEP completed his Emergency Medicine residency training at Cook County Hospital where he was named the Chief Resident in his senior year. Upon graduation he became a practicing attending emergency physician at Resurrection Medical Center in Chicago where he helped develop and establish an emergency medicine residency training program that graduates 12 emergency physicians per year.

After serving as the Associate Program Director for five years, Dr. Rumoro was hired at Rush in July of 2001 as the Clinical Chairman for the newly established Department of Emergency Medicine and was subsequently named Academic Chairman from 2010 to 2021. In addition to growing the emergency department to one of the busiest in the city, Dr. Rumoro developed the Advanced Trauma Training Program which focuses on pre-deployment advanced medical training for the military.

From 2005 to 2012, Dr. Rumoro was named to Rush's Office of Transformation as a Clinical Transformation Officer to assist with the planning and building of the patient care Tower with a state-of-the-art emergency department appropriately named the Center for Advanced Emergency Response partially funded by the McCormick Tribune Foundation. The "Center" was designed to be the first chemical, biological and radio-nuclear civilian-based response facility to augment the existing trauma system.

Dr. Rumoro served in other leadership roles including: President for the 1,300-member Medical Staff of Rush University Medical Center; Vice Dean for the Office of Integrated Medical Education and Clinical Faculty Operations; followed by two terms as Acting Dean of Rush Medical College. In July 2021 he became the President and CEO of Rush Oak Park Hospital in Oak Park, Illinois.
